FRESH MACKEREL AT NEW YORK TO-DAY.

Netters and Seiners Have Both Found the Much Sought Fish.

SCH. SPECULATOR HAS SPLENDID FARE OF 250 BARRELS.

Sch. Nourmahal There, Also Sch. Vera and Fleet of Sixteen Netters.

After three weeks of weary waiting and when it seemed that the familiar fisherman phrase, "the dog's dead," would have to be applied to the operations of the seining fleet in southern waters, the hearts of the interested ones here, and that includes about everyone in town, were cheered this morning by the old familiar expression, "Mackerel in New York."

Quickly the good news spread and soon a special to the TIMES, from its regular New York correspondent, gave the following list of arrivals there:

Sch. Speculator, Capt. William Corkum, 250 barrels fresh mackerel.

Sch. Vera, Capt. Gourley Anderson, 4000 fresh mackerel in count.

Sch. Nourmahal, Capt. Wallace Parsons, 80 barrels fresh mackerel.

Beside these good seining trips, the following netters also bobbed up:

Sch. Estelle S. Nunan, 600 fresh mackerel.

Sch. Mettacommet, 400 fresh mackerel.

Sch. General Hancock, 300 fresh mackerel.

Steamer Vigilant, 400 fresh mackerel.

Steamer Joppaite, 800 fresh mackerel.

Steamer Dorcas, 65 fresh mackerel.

Sch. Hester, 200 fresh mackerel.

Sch. Alert, 1300 fresh mackerel.

Sch. Evangeline, 300 fresh mackeael.

Steamer Lydia, 250 fresh mackerel.

Sch. Alena L. Young, 240 fresh mackerel.

Sch. Leona, 75 fresh mackerel.

Sch. Wodan, 400 fresh mackerel.

Sch. Marguerite, 200 fresh mackerel.

Sch. Nokomis, 40 fresh mackerel.

Sch. Sarah C. Wharf, 1250 fresh mackerel.

The trip which Capt. William Corkum brought in, gave him and the crew of the Speculator the credit of landing the biggest fresh mackerel fare of the season to date. As the fish are selling at 20 cents apiece, Capt. Corkum and his men will make a fine stock and share.

This is the second trip this season for the sch. Nourmahal, she being the only craft thus far this season to make New York twice with fresh mackerel. Her skipper, Capt. Wallace Parsons, is living up to his well earned reputation as one of the hustling young skippers of this port.

The news of these arrivals with mackerel has raised the hope that the fleet may yet strike the fish and that the southern mackerel season may not have "failure" written against it on the fishing record of 1904.

A special to the TIMES from Newport, R I., this noon states that the traps in that vicinity are now catching from 200 to 400 mackerel a day and that six schools were seen off there yesterday. No seiners or netters are there.

BAIT SCARCE ON MAINE COAST.

Unaccountable Scarcity of Herring Along That Shore.

The Rockland, Me., Star says there is a fleet of 40 sail at Boothbay Harbor, eight at Rockland and a dozen others anchored along the coast waiting for herring bait, which seems to have suddenly disappeared. Most of the fleet is from Boston and Gloucester and the absence of bait from Provincetown to Eastport is a remarkable feature of the peculiar cold spring succeeding the memorably cold winter. The fishermen are in a quandary and can only lie at anchor and await the arrival of either herring or alewives which should soon begin to appear in the rivers along the coast.
